

Anti-Bribery and Corruption Adaptive Learning

Adaptive learning course for global organisations covering key anti-bribery and corruption regulations

Course Overview

Set in an adaptive learning format, this course begins with an upfront assessment to help identify areas of weaknesses. The assessment helps tailor the course to the learners' needs. The adaptive learning approach is estimated to save up to 45 minutes per employee in unnecessary study time.

This online training course offers an in-depth and detailed look at anti-bribery practices across the world. The course also covers additional international bribery threats that may be encountered whilst working abroad and the differences in legislation. Suitable for employees who could be at risk of global bribery, the course is designed to educate members of staff, reduce risks, and help protect your organisation and employees.

Key Learning Points

- How to avoid committing international bribery offences
- What to do if asked to make facilitation payments
- Which gifts or hospitality can and can't be accepted
- How to recognise bribery when it occurs
- What employees should do if they think they're being bribed
