

Understanding Communication Styles

An eLearning course on understanding personality types, communication styles and their importance in your team

Course Overview

Everyone has different personality types and communication styles. When working in a team, it can be helpful to understand our own and others' styles so we can relate to each other better and communicate effectively. In some cases, adapting your communication style to the preferred style of individual team members can improve performance and productivity.

In our Understanding Communication Styles eLearning short course, learners explore the different types of communication styles and how to recognise who has which style. The course looks at the core behaviours that link to each style and how these behaviours can affect the success and productivity of teams.

Key Learning Points

- Be aware of different personality types and communication styles
- Understand the correlation between personality types and communication styles
- Be aware of the different types of behaviour that can be displayed for each communication style
- Understand how to recognise different communication styles
- Understand how adapting your communication methods to match your team can improve performance and productivity
