

Implementing Reasonable Adjustments for Students

Enable staff to identify issues and take practical steps to ensure students with disabilities are treated fairly.

Course Overview

Universities, colleges and schools have a legal responsibility for making reasonable adjustments to ensure disabled students aren't unfairly disadvantaged or excluded.

Our Implementing Reasonable Adjustments for Students online training course has been specifically designed for staff working in education. It provides them with a practical understanding of what the law means when it talks about "disability" and "reasonable adjustments". It also provides clear guidance on how to identify and implement reasonable adjustments effectively. By deploying the course, you'll help to ensure you meet your legal obligations and treat disabled students fairly.

Key Learning Points

- Be able to define the term 'disability'.
- Understand the legislation behind reasonable adjustments.
- Understand the three-step framework for identifying reasonable adjustments that address people's needs.
